

Savannah, Ga and The Lowcountry Race, Power, and the Preservation of African-American History & Gullah-Geechee Culture

Overview

During this five-day program, explore the preservation of African-American history and culture in Savannah and Georgia's coastal islands. Experience the historic city of Savannah, with its stunning architecture and grand live oaks dripping with Spanish moss, as well as the lovely Lowcountry coastal landscape, with its expansive marshes and refreshing sea breezes. Through a service-learning project and cultural immersion, learn how different museums and heritage organizations preserve the history of African-Americans in the Lowcountry. Focusing on the themes of race, slavery, and the education of African-Americans this program considers the impact of geography, environment, and diaspora on the development of community values and culture by looking at two different experiences: the urban environment of Savannah and the rural Gullah-Geechee culture on the barrier island Sapelo. The Gullah-Geechee culture is distinctive and found only in the Lowcountry: the Gullah-Geechee people are descended from formerly enslaved people, primarily from the East Coast of Africa. During this program engage in a service-learning project with museums and heritage sites. Learn how to establish reciprocal partnerships with similar organizations back in your home community for future collaboration within the classroom. Receive a professional development certificate for training in creating a culturally responsive classroom, and using the Nobis Global Action Method to guide students to complete culturally focused service-learning projects.

Service-Learning Project

Teachers will immerse themselves in the culture and history of Savannah, explore the African American experience as interpreted by the African American Heritage museum, the King-Tisdell Cottage. Teachers will then create lesson plans for the King-Tisdell Cottage museums to use with schools (both local and across the country) in order to teach about the history of the black experience in Savannah, Ga. Many teachers use the lessons with their own students when they return to their classrooms.
